

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

KENNETH WATSON,
TDCJ No. 2220017,

Petitioner,

V.

DIRECTOR, TDCJ-CID,

Respondent.

§
§
§
§
§
§
§
§
§

No. 3:19-cv-1008-B-BN

FINDINGS, CONCLUSIONS, AND RECOMMENDATION OF THE
UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE

Petitioner Kenneth Watson was convicted of failing to register as a sex offender and sentenced to three years of imprisonment. See State v. Watson, F17-76271-X (Crim. Dist. Ct. No. 6, Dallas Cnty., Tex. Aug. 28, 2018); Dkt. No. 18-9 at 5-7; see also Dkt. No. 18-10 at 19-23 (judgment as to Watson's 1992 conviction for indecency with a child as a habitual offender, in the 142nd District Court of Midland County, Texas).

Watson did not appeal. But the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals (the CCA) denied his initial state habeas application without written order. See Ex parte Watson, WR-80,683-03 (Tex. Crim. App. Mar. 20, 2019); Dkt. No. 18-6; TEX. R. APP. P. 73.2. And the CCA denied his subsequent habeas application without written order on the findings of the trial court without a hearing. See Ex parte Watson, WR-80,683-04 (Tex. Crim. App. Apr. 10, 2019); Dkt. Nos. 18-8, 18-9, 18-10.

Watson, through a timely pro se application for a writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, now claims that the CCA's adjudication of his second habeas application was unreasonable. See Dkt. No. 3.

United States District Judge Jane J. Boyle referred the Section 2254 application to the undersigned United States magistrate judge for pretrial management under 28 U.S.C. § 636(b) and a standing order of reference. The State responded. See Dkt. No. 19. But Watson failed to reply, and the deadline by which to do so has expired.

The undersigned now enters these findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation that the Court should deny federal habeas relief.

Legal Standards

“Federal habeas features an intricate procedural blend of statutory and caselaw authority.” Adekeye v. Davis, 938 F.3d 678, 682 (5th Cir. 2019). In the district court, this process begins – and often ends – with the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (AEDPA), under which “state prisoners face strict procedural requirements and a high standard of review.” Adekeye, 938 F.3d at 682 (citation omitted). This is because, “[u]nder AEDPA, state courts play the leading role in assessing challenges to state sentences based on federal law.” Shinn v. Kayer, 141 S. Ct. 517, 526 (2020) (per curiam).

So, where a state court has already rejected a claim on the merits, a federal court may grant habeas relief on that claim only if the state court adjudication

- (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or
- (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

The statute therefore “restricts the power of federal courts to grant writs of habeas corpus based on claims that were ‘adjudicated on the merits’ by a state court,” Shinn, 141 S. Ct. at 520 (citation omitted). And, “[w]hen a state court has applied clearly established federal law to reasonably determined facts in the process of adjudicating a claim on the merits, a federal habeas court may not disturb the state court’s decision unless its error lies ‘beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.’” Id. (quoting Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 103 (2011)).

Further, “[u]nder § 2254(d),” the reasonableness of the state court decision – not whether it is correct – “is ‘the only question that matters.’” Id. at 526 (quoting Richter, 562 U.S. at 102); see also Schriro v. Landrigan, 550 U.S. 465, 473 (2007) (“The question under AEDPA is not whether a federal court believes the state court’s determination was incorrect but whether that determination was unreasonable – a substantially higher threshold.”); Sanchez v. Davis, 936 F.3d 300, 305 (5th Cir. 2019) (“[T]his is habeas, not a direct appeal, so our focus is narrowed. We ask not whether the state court denial of relief was incorrect, but whether it was unreasonable – whether its decision was ‘so lacking in justification’ as to remove ‘any possibility for fairminded disagreement.’” (citation omitted)).

A state court adjudication on direct appeal is due the same deference under Section 2254(d) as an adjudication in a state post-conviction proceeding. See, e.g., Dowthitt v. Johnson, 230 F.3d 733, 756-57 (5th Cir. 2000) (a finding made by the CCA on direct appeal was an “issue ... adjudicated on the merits in state proceedings,” to be “examine[d] ... with the deference demanded by AEDPA” under “28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)"). And nothing "in AEDPA or [the Supreme] Court's precedents permit[s] reduced deference to merits decisions of lower state courts." Shinn, 141 S. Ct. at 524 n.2 (citing 28 U.S.C. § 2254).

Starting with Section 2254(d)(1), a state court decision is "contrary" to clearly established federal law if "it relies on legal rules that directly conflict with prior holdings of the Supreme Court or if it reaches a different conclusion than the Supreme Court on materially indistinguishable facts." Busby v. Dretke, 359 F.3d 708, 713 (5th Cir. 2004); see also Lopez v. Smith, 574 U.S. 1, 2 (2014) (per curiam) ("We have emphasized, time and time again, that the [AEDPA] prohibits the federal courts of appeals from relying on their own precedent to conclude that a particular constitutional principle is 'clearly established.'" (citation omitted)).

"A state court unreasonably applies clearly established Supreme Court precedent when it improperly identifies the governing legal principle, unreasonably extends (or refuses to extend) a legal principle to a new context, or when it gets the principle right but 'applies it unreasonably to the facts of a particular prisoner's case.'" Will v. Lumpkin, 978 F.3d 933, 940 (5th Cir. 2020) (quoting Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 407-08 (2000); citation omitted). "But the Supreme Court has only clearly established precedent if it has 'broken sufficient legal ground to establish an asked-for constitutional principle.'" Id. (quoting Taylor, 569 U.S. at 380-82; citations omitted).

As noted above, "[f]or purposes of § 2254(d)(1), an unreasonable application of federal law is different from an incorrect application of federal law.... A state court's determination that a claim lacks merit precludes federal habeas relief so long as fairminded jurists could disagree on the correctness of the state court's decision." Richter, 562 U.S. at 101 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). "Under § 2254(d), a habeas court must determine what arguments or theories supported or ... could have supported, the state court's decision; and then it must ask whether it is possible fairminded jurists could disagree that those arguments or theories are inconsistent with the holding in a prior decision of [the Supreme] Court." Id. at 102 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Evans v. Davis, 875 F.3d 210, 216 (5th Cir. 2017) (recognizing that Section 2254(d) tasks courts "with considering not only the arguments and theories the state habeas court actually relied upon to reach its ultimate decision but also all the arguments and theories it could have relied upon" (citation omitted)).

The Supreme Court has further explained that "[e]valuating whether a rule application was unreasonable requires considering the rule's specificity. The more general the rule, the more leeway courts have in reaching outcomes in case-by-case determinations." Richter, 562 U.S. at 101 (internal quotation marks omitted). And "even a strong case for relief does not mean the state court's contrary conclusion was unreasonable." Id. at 102. The Supreme Court has explained that, "[i]f this standard is difficult to meet, that is because it was meant to be," where, "[a]s amended by AEDPA, § 2254(d) stops short of imposing a complete bar on federal court relitigation of claims already rejected in state proceedings," but "[i]t preserves authority to issue the writ in cases where there is no possibility fairminded jurists could disagree that the state court's decision conflicts with this Court's precedents," and "[i]t goes no further." Id. Thus, "[a]s a condition for obtaining habeas corpus from a federal court, a state prisoner must show that the state court's ruling on the claim being presented in federal court was so lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement." Id. at 103; accord Burt v. Titlow, 571 U.S. 12, 20 (2013) ("If this standard is difficult to meet – and it is – that is because it was meant to be. We will not lightly conclude that a State's criminal justice system has experienced the extreme malfunction for which federal habeas relief is the remedy." (internal quotation marks, brackets, and citations omitted)).

As to Section 2254(d)(2)'s requirement that a petitioner show that the state court adjudication "resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding," the Supreme Court has explained that "a state-court factual determination is not unreasonable merely because the federal habeas court would have reached a different conclusion in the first instance" and that federal habeas relief is precluded even where the state court's factual determination is debatable. Wood v. Allen, 558 U.S. 290, 301, 303 (2010). Under this standard, "it is not enough to show that a state court's decision was incorrect or erroneous. Rather, a petitioner must show that the decision was objectively unreasonable, a substantially higher threshold requiring the petitioner to show that a reasonable factfinder must conclude that the state court's determination of the facts was unreasonable." Batchelor v. Cain, 682 F.3d 400, 405 (5th Cir. 2012) (brackets and internal quotation marks omitted).

The Court must presume that a state court’s factual determinations are correct and can find those factual findings unreasonable only where the petitioner “rebut[s] the presumption of correctness by clear and convincing evidence.” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1); Gardner v. Johnson, 247 F.3d 551, 560 (5th Cir. 2001).

This presumption applies not only to explicit findings of fact but also “to those unarticulated findings which are necessary to the state court’s conclusions of mixed law and fact.” Valdez v. Cockrell, 274 F.3d 941, 948 n.11 (5th Cir. 2001); see also Ford v. Davis, 910 F.3d 232, 235 (5th Cir. 2018) (Section 2254(e)(1) “‘deference extends not only to express findings of fact, but to the implicit findings of the state court.’ As long as there is ‘some indication of the legal basis for the state court’s denial of relief,’ the district court may infer the state court’s factual findings even if they were not expressly made.” (footnotes omitted)).

And, even if the state court errs in its factual findings, mere error is not enough – the state court’s decision must be “based on an unreasonable factual determination.... In other words, even if the [state court] had gotten [the disputed] factual determination right, its conclusion wouldn’t have changed.” Will, 978 F.3d at 942. Further, “determining whether a state court’s decision resulted from an unreasonable legal or factual conclusion does not require that there be an opinion from the state court explaining the state court’s reasoning.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 98; see also Pondexter v. Dretke, 346 F.3d 142, 148 (5th Cir. 2003) (“a federal habeas court is authorized by Section 2254(d) to review only a state court’s ‘decision,’ and not the written opinion explaining that decision” (quoting Neal v. Puckett, 286 F.3d 230, 246 (5th Cir. 2002) (en banc) (per curiam))); Evans, 875 F.3d at 216 n.4 (even where “[t]he state habeas court’s analysis [is] far from thorough,” a federal court “may not review [that] decision de novo simply because [it finds the state court’s] written opinion ‘unsatisfactory’” (quoting Neal, 286 F.3d at 246)).

Section 2254 thus creates a “highly deferential standard for evaluating state court rulings, which demands that state-court decisions be given the benefit of the doubt.” Woodford v. Visciotti, 537 U.S. 19, 24 (2002). To overcome this standard, a petitioner must show that “there was no reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 98. That is, a petitioner must, in sum, “show, based on the state-court record alone, that any argument or theory the state habeas court could have relied on to deny [him] relief would have either been contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established federal law as determined by the Supreme Court.” Evans, 875 F.3d at 217.

Analysis

Against this framework, Watson raises four claims: that the CCA unreasonably adjudicated (1) his challenge to the requirement that he register as a sex offender as charged in the indictment; (2) his claim that the trial court incorrectly applied punishment ex post facto; (3) his allegation that the prosecution failed to timely disclose exculpatory evidence; and (4) his claim that his Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of trial counsel was violated.

First, insofar as Watson’s first two claims present a question of federal law – not merely that the state court “incorrectly interpreted its own law,” Charles v. Thaler, 629 F.3d 494, 500-01 (5th Cir. 2011) (“Under § 2254, federal habeas courts sit to review state court misapplications of federal law.”) – Watson has not shown that the CCA either unreasonably applied federal law or unreasonable determined the evidence.

Watson argues, in sum, that the trial court lacked jurisdiction because he was not required to register as a sex offender and, further, that requiring him to register as a sex offender violates the Ex Post Facto Clause. See Dkt. No. 3 at 6-8.

True, Texas’s Sex Offender Registration Program, see TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 62.101(a)(1), “initially applied only to those persons convicted of a sex offense after 1991,” Gonzales v. Tex. Dep’t of Pub. Safety, No. 4:20-cv-145-P, 2020 WL 2839191, at *2 (N.D. Tex. June 1, 2020) (citing Rodriguez v. State, 93 S.W. 3d 60, 66 (Tex. Crim. App. 2002)). But, “[i]n 1997, the Texas legislature expanded the class of persons required to register to those individuals who had a reportable conviction or adjudication occurring on or after September 1, 1970.” Id. (citing Act of June 1, 1997, 75th Leg., R.S., ch. 668 §§ 1, 11, 1997 Tex. Gen. Laws 2260-61, 2264 (formerly TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 62.11)).

And the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit has made “clear that the Texas sex offender statute does not violate the Ex Post Facto Clause.” Id. (citing King v. McCraw, 559 F. App’x 278, 281 (5th Cir. 2014) (per curiam); Hayes v. Texas, 370 F. App’x 508, 509 (5th Cir. 2010) (per curiam)); see also King, 559 F. App’x at 281-82 (observing that, in unpublished opinions, the Fifth Circuit “has repeatedly affirmed a district court's dismissal as frivolous the claim that the retroactive application of Texas law requiring sex offender registration and notification violates the Ex Post Facto Clause" and that, "[a]lthough [these] decisions are not controlling precedent, [each] relied on the Supreme Court's holding in Smith v. Doe, 538 U.S. 84 (2003)," in which "the Supreme Court rejected an ex post facto challenge to Alaska's sex-offender-registration statute" (citations omitted)); Williams v. Tex. Bd. of Pardons & Parole, No. 3:18-cv-952-M-BN, 2018 WL 3747923, at *2 (N.D. Tex. July 25, 2018) ("[E]x post facto challenges to Texas's sex offender registration statute – amended in 1997 to make it retroactive to convictions, like Williams's, that occurred prior to 1991 – routinely fail. See, e.g., Garcia v. Dretke, No. Civ. A. H-05-1379, 2005 WL 3234370, at *6-*9 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 29, 2005); see also Rodriguez, 93 S.W.3d at 69 (determining that the statute poses no ex post facto violation as there is no evidence of punitive intent in the legislative history); Rieck v. Cockrell, 321 F.3d 487, 488 (5th Cir. 2003) (per curiam) (in affirming the requirement that a parolee participate in sex offender counseling, holding that the statute 'was not intended to be punitive and serves important nonpunitive goals')." (citation modified)), rec. accepted, 2018 WL 4075774 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 27, 2018).

Watson also has not shown that the CCA unreasonably denied his claim that the prosecution denied him due process by failing to disclose exculpatory evidence (which was, according to Watson, that he had no duty to register). See Dkt. No. 3 at 9-10. First, as reflected above, Watson was required to register. But, even if this evidence was exculpatory and thus favorable to Watson, possibly triggering Brady v.

Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), see Floyd v. Vannoy, 894 F.3d 143, 161 (5th Cir. 2018) (per curiam) (“Under Brady and its progeny, due process requires that the prosecution disclose evidence that is both favorable to the defendant and material to guilt or punishment.” (citing Brady, 373 U.S. at 87)), Watson pled guilty, see, e.g., Dkt. No. 18-9 at 5-7. And “settled precedent in this circuit [holds] that there [is] no constitutional right to Brady material prior to a guilty plea.” Alvarez v. City of Brownsville, 904 F.3d 382, 392 (5th Cir. 2018) (en banc) (citing United States v. Conroy, 567 F.3d 174, 178-79 (5th Cir. 2009) (citing, in turn, Matthew v. Johnson, 201 F.3d 353, 361-62 (5th Cir. 2000))); see also id. at 392-93 (examining authority and concluding that “case law from the Supreme Court, this circuit, and other circuits does not affirmatively establish that a constitutional violation occurs when Brady material is not shared during the plea bargaining process”).

Finally, Watson alleges a claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel (IATC). Specifically, that his counsel allowed him to plead guilty where Watson had no duty to register as a sex offender. See Dkt. No. 3 at 9-11.

The Court reviews the merits of properly exhausted IATC claims under the two-prong test established in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984), under which a petitioner “must show that counsel’s performance” – “strongly presume[d to be] good enough” – “was [1] objectively unreasonable and [2] prejudiced him.” Coleman v. Vannoy, 963 F.3d 429, 432 (5th Cir. 2020) (quoting Howard v. Davis, 959 F.3d 168, 171 (5th Cir. 2020)).

To count as objectively unreasonable, counsel’s error must be “so serious that counsel was not functioning as the ‘counsel’ guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687; see also Buck v. Davis, 137 S. Ct. 759, 775 (2017) (reaffirming that “[i]t is only when the lawyer’s errors were ‘so serious that counsel was not functioning as the “counsel” guaranteed ... by the Sixth Amendment’ that Strickland’s first prong is satisfied” (citation omitted)). “And to establish prejudice, a defendant must show ‘that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different.’” Andrus v. Texas, 140 S. Ct. 1875, 1881 (2020) (per curiam) (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694).

“A conscious and informed decision on trial tactics and strategy cannot be the basis for constitutionally ineffective assistance of counsel unless it is so ill chosen that it permeates the entire trial with obvious unfairness.” Cotton v. Cockrell, 343 F.3d 746, 752-53 (5th Cir. 2003); see also Feldman v. Thaler, 695 F.3d 372, 378 (5th Cir. 2012) (“[B]ecause of the risk that hindsight bias will cloud a court’s review of counsel’s trial strategy, ‘a court must indulge a strong presumption that counsel’s conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance; that is, the defendant must overcome the presumption that, under the circumstances, the challenged action might be considered sound trial strategy.’” (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689)).

And, “[j]ust as there is no expectation that competent counsel will be a flawless strategist or tactician, an attorney may not be faulted for a reasonable miscalculation or lack of foresight or for failing to prepare for what appear to be remote possibilities.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 110. “The Supreme Court has admonished courts reviewing a state court's denial of habeas relief under AEDPA that they are required not simply to give [the] attorney's the benefit of the doubt, ... but to affirmatively entertain the range of possible reasons [petitioner's] counsel may have had for proceeding as they did." Clark v. Thaler, 673 F.3d 410, 421 (5th Cir. 2012) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Therefore, on habeas review under AEDPA, "if there is any 'reasonable argument that counsel satisfied Strickland's deferential standard,' the state court's denial must be upheld." Rhoades v. Davis, 852 F.3d 422, 432 (5th Cir. 2017) (quoting Richter, 562 U.S. at 105); see also Sanchez, 936 F.3d at 305 ("As the State rightly puts it, we defer 'both to trial counsel's reasoned performance and then again to the state habeas court's assessment of that performance.'" (quoting Rhoades, 852 F.3d at 434)).

To demonstrate prejudice, a habeas petitioner "must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. Thus, "the question is not whether a court can be certain counsel's performance had no effect on the outcome or whether it is possible a reasonable doubt might have been established if counsel acted differently." Richter, 562 U.S. at 111. "Instead, Strickland asks whether it is 'reasonably likely' the result would have been different," which "does not require a showing that counsel's actions 'more likely than not altered the outcome,' but the difference between Strickland's prejudice standard and a more-probable-than-not standard is slight and matters 'only in the rarest case.'" Id. at 111-

12 (quoting Strickland, 466 U.S. at 693, 696, 697). “The likelihood of a different result must be substantial, not just conceivable.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 112.

IATC claims are considered mixed questions of law and fact and are therefore analyzed under the “unreasonable application” standard of 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1). See Gregory v. Thaler, 601 F.3d 347, 351 (5th Cir. 2010); Adekeye, 938 F.3d at 682.

Where the state court has adjudicated claims of ineffective assistance on the merits, this Court must review a habeas petitioner’s claims under the “doubly deferential” standards of both Strickland and Section 2254(d). Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170, 190, 202 (2011); compare Rhoades, 852 F.3d at 434 (“Our federal habeas review of a state court’s denial of an ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claim is ‘doubly deferential’ because we take a highly deferential look at counsel’s performance through the deferential lens of § 2254(d).” (citation omitted)), with Johnson v. Sec’y, DOC, 643 F.3d 907, 910-11 (11th Cir. 2011) (“Double deference is doubly difficult for a petitioner to overcome, and it will be a rare case in which an ineffective assistance of counsel claim that was denied on the merits in state court is found to merit relief in a federal habeas proceeding.”); see also Canfield v. Lumpkin, ___ F.3d ___, No. 18-10431, 2021 WL 2024940, at *3 (5th Cir. May 21, 2021) (“Strickland ... imposes a high bar on those alleging ineffective assistance of counsel. But 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d) ... raises the bar even higher.”); cf. Shinn, 141 S. Ct. at 525 (“recogniz[ing] the special importance of the AEDPA framework in cases involving Strickland claims,” since “[i]neffective-assistance claims can function ‘as a way to escape rules of waiver and forfeiture,’ and they can drag federal courts into resolving questions of state law” (quoting Richter, 562 U.S. at 105)).

In such cases, the “pivotal question” for this Court is not “whether defense counsel’s performance fell below Strickland’s standard”; it is “whether the state court’s application of the Strickland standard was unreasonable.” Richter, 562 U.S. at 101; see also id. at 105 (“Establishing that a state court’s application of Strickland was unreasonable under § 2254(d) is all the more difficult. The standards created by Strickland and § 2254(d) are both ‘highly deferential,’ and when the two apply in tandem, review is ‘doubly’ so.” (internal quotation marks and citations omitted)). “And, because the Strickland standard is a general standard, a state court has even more latitude to reasonably determine that a defendant has not satisfied that standard.” Knowles v. Mirzayance, 556 U.S. 111, 123 (2009) (citation omitted).

In sum, AEDPA does not permit a de novo review of state counsel’s conduct in these claims under Strickland. See Richter, 562 U.S. at 101-02. Instead, on federal habeas review of a Strickland claim fully adjudicated in state court, the state court’s determination is granted “a deference and latitude that are not in operation when the case involves review under the Strickland standard itself.” Id. at 101; see Canfield, 2021 WL 2024940, at *3 (Federal courts “review state-court adjudications for errors ‘so obviously wrong’ as to lie ‘beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement,’” presuming the state court “findings of fact to be correct.” (footnotes omitted)).¹

¹ See also Woods v. Etherton, 136 S. Ct. 1149, 1151 (2016) (per curiam) (explaining that federal habeas review of ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claims is “doubly deferential” “because counsel is ‘strongly presumed to have rendered adequate assistance and made all significant decisions in the exercise of reasonable professional judgment’”; therefore, “federal courts are to afford ‘both the state court

For the reasons stated above – reflecting that Watson’s claim that he was not required to register as a sex offender is frivolous – Watson has not shown that the CCA’s denial of a claim of IATC premised on a contention that a guilty plea was involuntary because trial counsel failed to advise Watson that he had no duty to register is either “an unreasonable application of Strickland or an unreasonable determination of the evidence.” Garza v. Stephens, 738 F.3d 669, 680 (5th Cir. 2013) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1)-(2)); see also, e.g., Rhodes, 852 F.3d at 432, 434; Sanchez, 936 F.3d at 305.

Recommendation

The Court should deny the application for a writ of habeas corpus.

A copy of these findings, conclusions, and recommendation shall be served on all parties in the manner provided by law. Any party who objects to any part of these findings, conclusions, and recommendation must file specific written objections and the defense attorney the benefit of the doubt” (quoting Burt, 571 U.S. at 22, 15)); Adekeye, 938 F.3d at 683-84 (“The Supreme Court standard on prejudice is sharply defined: ‘It is not enough for the defendant to show that the errors had some conceivable effect on the outcome of the proceeding.’ [A petitioner] must show it was ‘reasonably likely’ the jury would have reached a different result, not merely that it could have reached a different result. The Court reaffirmed this point in Richter: ‘The likelihood of a different result must be substantial, not just conceivable.’ Now layer on top of that the habeas lens of reasonableness. [Where] the state court has already adjudicated [a petitioner’s] ineffective-assistance claim on the merits, he must show that the court’s no-prejudice decision is ‘not only incorrect but “objectively unreasonable.”’ Put differently, [he] must show that every reasonable jurist would conclude that it is reasonable likely that [a petitioner] would have fared better at trial had his counsel conducted [himself differently]. ‘It bears repeating,’ the Supreme Court emphasized in Richter, ‘that even a strong case for relief does not mean the state court’s contrary conclusion was unreasonable.’” (footnotes omitted)).

within 14 days after being served with a copy. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1); FED. R. CIV. P. 72(b). In order to be specific, an objection must identify the specific finding or recommendation to which objection is made, state the basis for the objection, and specify the place in the magistrate judge's findings, conclusions, and recommendation where the disputed determination is found. An objection that merely incorporates by reference or refers to the briefing before the magistrate judge is not specific. Failure to file specific written objections will bar the aggrieved party from appealing the factual findings and legal conclusions of the magistrate judge that are accepted or adopted by the district court, except upon grounds of plain error. See Douglass v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 79 F.3d 1415, 1417 (5th Cir. 1996).

DATED: June 9, 2021

DAVID L. HORAN
UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE